

Players selected for U-15 identification camp in Ontario as part of Canada Soccer's Men's Excel Program

Canada Soccer's Men's National Youth Program's second of three Spring 2016 identification camps will feature 23 players in Vaughan, Ontario from 28 February to 3 March. The U-15 camp will feature players born 2001 or later.

Canada Soccer's Technical Director Tony Fonseca and coaching staff have organized three identification camps in February and March of this year. The three camps will allow Canada Soccer's coaching staff to assess more than 60 bright Canadian prospects from across the country. The western camp took place in Burnaby from 8-11 February; the upcoming eastern camp takes place in Montréal from 20-23 March.

"We have been encouraged by the number of younger quality players in our Men's National Team in recent years," said Tony Fonseca, Canada Soccer's Technical Director. "Our players are growing up with a solid foundation of skill. You can see from the interaction with our national program, the future is bright."

Just last year, Canada Soccer's Men's National Youth Program engaged in 20 camps and tournaments from the U-15 to U-23 levels. That schedule included the CONCACAF Men's Under-17 Championship, the CONCACAF Men's Under-20 Championship, and the CONCACAF Men's Olympic Qualifying Tournament. The schedule also included youth identification camps at different age levels. In all, 3,623 player days were afforded to 311 Canadian youth players over the course of the year.

Canada Soccer's Men's EXCEL Program channels our nation's exceptional players into the best soccer environments. The Canada Soccer Pathway works in collaboration with our provincial and territory partners as well as the professional clubs and academies. For Canada's elite players, the program emphasizes player development on the pathway to representing Canada's Men's National Team in international soccer.
